Nonprofit files for local FM radio station

FM 92.9 would be part of effort to create a grassroots media organization for West Sac

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The News-Ledger and its editor, Steve Marschke, are a part of the effort described below. Volunteers are attempting to create a grassroots, nonprofit news center to serve West Sacramento into the future.)

WES BEERS: president of nonprofit that just applied for a low-power FM radio license in West Sac

A West Sacramento nonprofit group has filed an application with the FCC to create a local, low-power FM radio station in West Sacramento. The group has asked for authorization to use bandwidth at 92.9 on the dial.

What kinds of shows might be aired at the new station?

"We're hopeful in three areas," said Wes Beers, a project proponent. "One is to bring a lot more community-based news to West Sacramento. The second is to partner with the city (government) in part to be available for emergency broadcasting, but also to broadcast items of interest to the city. Last, and maybe the most fun and exciting part, would be to work with the schools to broadcast school news and partner with them academically to enrich their broadcasting and journalism programs."

The partnerships could involve River City High School and the local branch of the Sacramento City College, said Beers.

"They could broadcast school basketball games, football games, swim meets – and I think there's an ability to 'stream' these broadcasts to the internet," he added.

The City of West Sacramento paid the $2,000 consulting fee to a Davis-based nonprofit that assembled this radio station application. The application included an engineering study intended to show the new station would not interfere with existing stations that are nearby on the map and also nearby on the dial.

What does the city government want for its investment?

"Their interest, I think, is twofold," said Beers. "They believe that having another form of communication to the community for an emergency situation would be a vital resource. And secondly, I think they're excited about having the opportunity to enrich the community and the schools."

The radio station application process can be competitive, and the Federal Communications Commission hasn't yet responded to the application. But the names of all the other applicants have been released, and it doesn't appear that anyone else in the region has submitted a conflicting claim for the same bandwidth.

The new radio proposal came out of a project to create a nonprofit news and information organization.

Beers, a former West Sacramento mayor and city councilman, began meeting in 2012 with the News-Ledger and various local citizens interested in starting a local, nonprofit media group.

"So much of our news is fed to us by bigger and bigger corporations, and this will keep and maintain an opportunity for a local perspective," said Beers.

The group learned in July that the FCC would shortly accept applications for new low-power FM radio licenses – a relatively rare offering from the feds. Local volunteers, including Jim Brewer (who is also active in the local historical society and a Bryte/Broderick area community group) quickly scrambled to hit the FCC's application deadline.

Meanwhile, this same group of eight volunteers became the new board of the West Sacramento Neighbors Fair, Inc. -- an existing nonprofit in West Sac.

The Neighbors Fair organization was winding down its mission of bringing an annual community fair to West Sacramento, and its former leaders invited the new blood to take the helm and pursue a new type of "educational" nonprofit mission.

The new board is now starting to "repurpose" that nonprofit, said Beers.

It's the West Sacramento Neighbors Fair nonprofit that filed for the radio license last month. Its new board members include Beers, his wife Jolaine Beers, Brewer, retired city manager Joe Goeden, Charlotte Dorsey, Carrie Fisher, John Siden and Gina Spadafori.

In Davis, the community radio station ("KDRT") shares a building with a public access cable TV production facility.

The West Sacramento nonprofit is exploring a vision that could include print and online news, cable TV features, online streaming of video and audio, and the proposed radio station.

But all that is still in its planning stages.

West Sacramento is already home to KJAY radio at AM 1430. According to its website, KJAY brings the Sacramento region programming that includes Hmong-language features, religious programs and "international" content. KJAY is located in rural Southport.

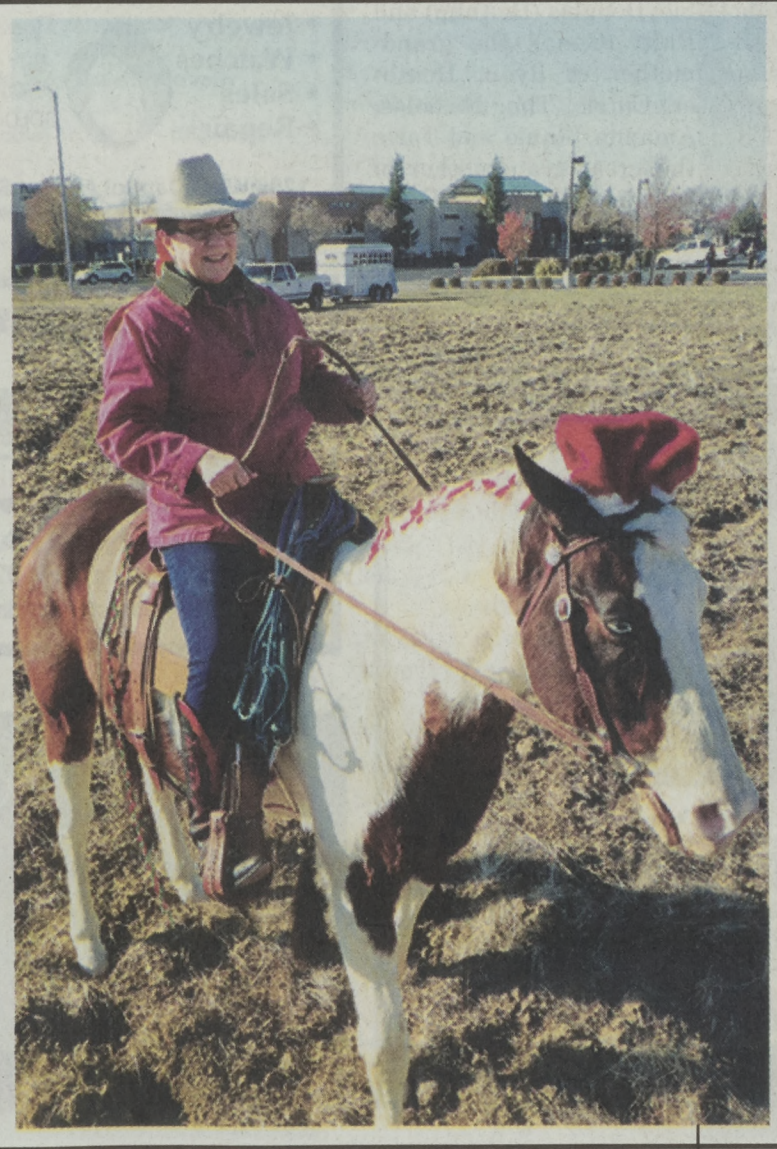

Trouble in the street

A water main broke under West Capitol Avenue on Tuesday, December 10. That led to street flooding and buckled pavement, closing the eastbound lanes of the street until enough repair work was complete on Friday morning.

The mess occurred on the west side of the intersection of West Capitol and Jefferson Boulevard.

Four-legged toy drive

Roberta Firoved (left) was among the members of the West Sacramento Trail Riders Association who rode to Southport's Fire Station 45 with a delivery of holiday toys for local distribution.

Club members met at Tower Mart on Linden Road's southern intersection with Jefferson, and rode north on Jefferson to the fire station at Lake Washington Boulevard.

There, they passed along items for the firefighters' "Toys for Tots" collection.

Holiday deadlines

Each of the next two weeks -- December 25 and January 1 -- the News-Ledger publishes on a major holiday.

Because we need to print our newspapers and get them into the mail a little bit early for these two editions, our deadlines will be strict.

Anything submitted for inclusion in these two editions must be received by the News-Ledger no later than the prior Friday.

This includes both ads and news items.

You can always contact us at:

A case of 'Christmas Decoration Disease'

Note: Daryl is off this week. Below is one of his favorite Christmas columns from the past.

By Daryl Fisher

A few Decembers ago, I noticed that one of my neighbors was busy hanging up his outside Christmas lights, and being the helpful person I am, I decided to stroll across the street and see if he needed any assistance.

"Thanks," he said from the ladder he was teetering on, "but I think I've got it pretty much under control now. It's all the junk I have to put up on the roof that is going to be the real problem."

"What are you going to put up there?" I asked with interest.

"Rudolf and a bunch of his stupid reindeers," he answered, obviously not quite yet into the Christmas spirit.

"Well," I said, as he continued to struggle with a long string of multi-colored light bulbs, "hanging up all those lights sure looks like a two-person job. How come your wife isn't out here giving you a hand?"

That brought a smile to his face and he said, "The deal is that I do all the outside decorating and my wife does the inside. And believe me, I'm getting the easier of the two jobs! In fact, she's probably in the house right this very minute ordering some more garbage out of those darn holiday gift catalogs of hers. She says all that stuff only costs about five dollars each, but the woman is five-dollaring me to death! Plus she's got tons of inside decorations piled up in boxes in the garage that she hasn't even looked at yet this year. You would think she would be able to part with some of that stuff over the years, but every single ornament and do-dad seems to have a special meaning to her. You know, things a relative left her before they died and such. I mean, I would have to get us a half-dozen Christmas trees if she wanted to hang up all the ornaments she has in those boxes!"

"My wife goes a little nuts at Christmas time, too," I admitted.

"Well, I guess a lot of people do. But putting Rudolph the Red Nosed Reindeer up on the stupid roof this year is where I've decided to draw the line. I'm going to do it just this once, to keep peace in the family this Christmas, but when New Years gets here, Rudolph is toast!"

Later that night, I decided to mention to my wife that I had actually volunteered to help one of our neighbors hang up his outside Christmas lights.

"He didn't let you, did he?" she asked with obvious concern, well aware that I have a tendency to screw up such things.

"No, but we got to talking, and it looks like his wife is suffering from Christmas decorating disease."

"And just what is Christmas decorating disease?" my wife asked with interest.

"Well, don't take this personal or anything, but just look around," I said, pointing to all the candles, wreaths, miniature Kris Kringles and poinsettia plants which littered the house. "I mean, a person can barely take a step around here without tripping over a Christmas do-dad. The next thing I know we'll have one of those frogs that croak out Jingle Bells."

"And you call that `Christmas decorating disease', do you?" asked my wife.

"Well, that's just a little phrase I came up with," I mumbled.

"They are not do-dads," explained my wife with emphasis. "And just what is wrong with making the house look Christmassy at this time of year? It's the season to be merry, remember?"

"But do we really need all this stuff to celebrate Christmas?" I asked, pointing to some of the brightly colored knickknacks, scented candle jars (which I especially hate), and nativity scenes on top of the desk and piano. "And must we have a red table cloth on the dining room table that says `Joy To The World' on it?"

"I, and all your children, happen to like how the house is decorated," said my wife. "We can't help it if you're an old scrooge."

"Look, I tell you what," I said with my best compromising voice, "I won't say another word if you will just please get rid of those things that are hanging on all of our doorknobs and jingle when I try to open or close a door. What are they anyway?"

"They are just Christmas door things," she answered with apparent simplicity.

"Door things?"

"You know, things you hang on doorknobs at Christmas time."

I turned my attention to her latest purchase, a three-foot-high electrified Christmas tree constructed totally out of old empty Coca-Cola cans.

"I know you hang them on doorknobs, but what are they called?"

"Who cares!"

Unable to convince my wife that no matter what the season, nothing should be allowed into a house which cannot be identified by name, I turned my attention to her latest purchase, a three-foot-high electrified Christmas tree constructed totally out of old empty Coca-Cola cans.

"You're not really going to put that out where people can actually see it, are you?" I asked.

"Of course I am. And I've got a real nice spot picked out for it near the kitchen window."

"You're going to put that god-awful looking thing in a window?"

"Sure. It has pretty little green, red, blue and yellow lights on it. And people will be able to see it all the way from the street. All I need is an extension cord. You haven't seen an extra one lying around, have you?"

Recalling how my brave neighbor had told me that he had decided to put his foot down (next year of course) about having Rudolph the Red Nosed Reindeer on his roof, I said as sternly as I could to my wife, "No way are you putting a Christmas tree made out of old Coca-Cola cans where all our neighbors can see it! Sorry, but I'm really going to have to put my foot down on this one!"

"Right," said my wife, trying unsuccessfully not to laugh as she went off in search of an extension cord.

City of West Sac honors its managers

From the City of West Sacramento

The City of West Sacramento has announced its management award recipients for 2013, honoring twelve members of the city government's management team.

The City named Rick Toft, the Port's Business Manager, as "Manager of the Year." Toft worked on the transition of the Port of West Sacramento to a landlord-lessee operation, which allowed the port to reduce its operating expenses. In addition to negotiating the North Terminal Master Lease with SSA Pacific, Toft generated additional new leases and renewals in raising over $200,000 in port revenue. He also led efforts to significantly clean up the Port and its surrounding area.

The City recognized four additional managers with awards of excellence for particular skills in improving City services and performance:

- Robert Kahrs, Public Works Maintenance Superintendent, for responding to equipment performance issues and other emergencies;
- Robert Miller, IT Manager, for his assistance on the mobile data computer replacement

Follow-up: marijuana rules

An online reader of the News-Ledger complained that our Dec. 4 article detailing proposed new restrictions on growers of medical marijuana lacked enough context.

The article included a reference to data collected in West Sacramento since 2008. And it included a quote from a city staff report saying, in part, that "the number of complaints that specifically identify marijuana has doubled every year to 2012."

The reader wanted to know if all that "doubling" had added up to a significant number of complaints – or if it was just a matter, say, of doubling from "one" to "two."

Here's some more information:

According to the staff report, the city received 22 "marijuana related" complaints in 2008, rising to 112 complaints in 2012 and slipping to 92 in 2013.

The city received six calls for service regarding marijuana cultivation in 2008, rising to 27 calls in 2013.

Police were not called to any crime scenes involving marijuana cultivation in 2008, but did respond to five such calls in both 2012 and 2013.

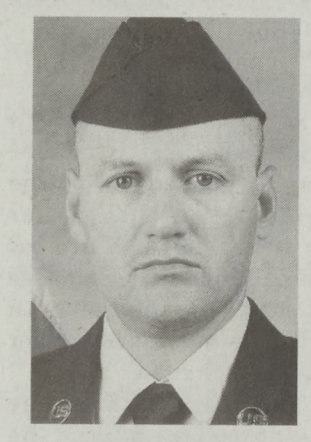

To see the full report, look for the Dec. 5 agenda of the city planning commission at the city's website. The report is at:

http://www.cityofwestsacramento.org/civica/filebank/blobdload.asp?BlobID=9922

The planning commission on Dec. 5 approved the proposed new restrictions, commission member Charlie Moore told the News-Ledger. The rules would limit the size of indoor marijuana growing, prohibit cultivation within 600 feet of a school or child care center, and impose other requirements. The City of West Sacramento already prohibits outdoor marijuana cultivation.

The proposed new restrictions will return to the city council for a final vote.

Southport levee project done, says Army Corps

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers announced this week it has finished work on a setback levee near South River Road in West Sacramento.

Construction included a new "cutoff wall," designed to strengthen the levee and keep water from seeping thorugh underneath. The old levee was left in place while the new one was built.

"Setback levees are bulit farther back from the river channel than typical levees, and are intended not only to reduce flood risk but also to preserve wildlife habitat between the water and levee," reports the Corps.

Next year, work crews are scheduled to remove the old levee and repave South River Road atop the new 2,200-foot setback levee.

The project is part of hte "Sacramento River Bank Protection Project, involving the Corps and the California central Valley Flood Protection Board.

The officer ran after him, yelling at him to stop. The officer caught the suspect in the intersection.

"As I grabbed his jacket, he fell over his bike and I landed on top of him," reported the officer.

The woman was arrested.

Dec. 15, 9:30 a.m.

A 31-year old St. John Road man was pulled over by police at Rice and Glide avenues for failing to stop at a stop sign.

A records check showed the man was wanted for a "failure to appear" in court. He was arrested, and also found with 0.3 grams of methamphetamine.

Dec. 15, 7:15 p.m.

An officer contacted a 43-year old West Sacramento woman "while she was dumpster diving on private property" along Seaport Avenue.

The woman was on probation. She was searched and found with 0.24 grams of methamphetamine in her jacket pocket.

The officer reported that the woman "stated she found the meth, knew what it was, and intended to ingest it later."

Dec. 15, 10 p.m.

A Cummins Way man was involved in a traffic accident at 6th Street and California. He was arrested for DUI.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The West Sacramento Police Department is undergoing a transition in its data management. Because of this, we currently have access to many of the department's arrest reports, but not to the logs of calls for service and reports of crime.

Responding to an inquiry from the News-Ledger, a spokesman said the department hopes for a solution sometime after January 1.

Joseph Gordon Levitt, Scarlett Johansson in 'DonJ on'

PICKS OF THE WEEK

"Don Jon" (R) -- Jon Martello (Joseph Gordon Levitt) is as buff and tan as he is shallow and vain. The loud-mouthed young man is dubbed "Don Jon" by his friends for his abilities to seduce pretty ladies every weekend. He's finally challenged by a gorgeous gal (Scarlett Johansson) who won't "give it up" on the first date. You may think an adorable relationship is blossoming, but they have to get over their respective media delusions: She wants the saccharine romance of terrible romcoms, and he's addicted to adult entertainment.

This is the directorial debut for Joseph Gordon Levitt -- who also wrote the script and took the title role. He's shown himself to be a capable commander in the director's chair. There is plenty to dislike about the lead roles, but they somehow come across as charming human beings.

"Last Love" (NR) -- Mr. Morgan (Michael Caine) is a crusty old American philosophy professor lamenting his golden years alone in Paris. His hobbies include being alone and talking to his deceased wife. In a chance meeting on a crowded bus, he meets Pauline (Clemence Poesy), an adorable dance instructor who helps Mr. Morgan come to grips with this phase of his life. Add two unaffectionate adult children, and the late-in-life romance is completed with a touch of family drama.

It's hard to say if much happens in the nearly two-hour-long runtime of the film. While Caine, Poesy and the adult children (Michael Kirk and Gillian Anderson) deliver decent performances, the story doesn't supply enough drama for the relationships to shine.

"Sweetwater" (R) -- In a sun-scorched corner of the Wild West, the dullest revenge story ever told slowly unwraps. Sarah (January Jones of TV's "Mad Men") is a reformed prostitute living the frontier life. A local preacher (Jason Isaacs) -- crooked as they come -- commands the town's thugs to carry out his will. The best part of the film is the underutilized Ed Harris, playing an eccentric lawman investigating the preacher. For a rootin' tootin' shootin' good time, do not hitch your wagon to this lame horse.

"CBGB" (R) -- How can a movie about the cradle of American punk rock be so sweet and tame? That's the problem in this low-volume tribute to the NYC bar where many an act -- including The Ramones and Blondie -- tuned their guitars and blew minds. Alan Rickman delivers an underwhelming performance as the bar's proprietor. The majority of the film involves semi-famous young actors portraying famous music acts, with little edge or insight. Yep, those guys sure are dressed up like The Ramones. The final nail in the coffin is the music scenes -- all of the performances are lip-synched to famous recordings, destroying any illusion of energetic live performances.

"Contagion"
by Tim Lebbon
(Pyr, $17.99)
Reviewed by Ealish Waddell

In the near future of the "Toxic City" trilogy, London has been decimated by an act of terrorism that released a biological agent known as Evolve. Most of the population were killed instantly by the toxin, and a few who survived found themselves with new mental powers to heal, to manipulate and even to kill. To contain these frightening new abilities, the government razed the suburbs and declared London forbidden ground.

When teen Jack and his friends uncover evidence that their relatives might still be alive inside the city, they risk their lives to cross the border. Instead of the empty wastes they'd been led to expect, they encounter a war zone, where scattered refugees struggle to survive, hunted not only by feral beasts and military thugs, but also by vicious members of their own kind. To his horror, Jack's father has become one of the latter, changed by Evolve into a villain beyond recognition. And after a bizarre encounter with Patient Zero, Jack himself begins to develop odd new abilities ...

In the final book of the trilogy, "Contagion," Jack has managed to rescue his mother and sister, but his mission in London is not over. Their friend Lucy-Anne is lost in the mutant-filled wilds of the north. Jack's father and his gang of lethal Superiors continue their reign of terror. And the massive bomb buried under London has been triggered, counting down to annihilation in a matter of hours. As Jack urgently searches his newfound powers for solutions, he realizes that he alone may be the key to London's future, and that it just might take everything he's got.

Energetic and fast-paced, "Contagion" is a gripping wrap-up to an intense dystopian adventure, delivering moment after moment of visceral horror right up to the shocking end. But its overall tone is one of hope amidst heartrending loss, and of people clinging to their humanity in the face of unspeakable tragedy.

Hearty Soup Keeps Winter Chill at Bay

For many people, the cold weather is a reason not to exercise outside or not to exercise at all. However, it is possible to get a great workout outdoors this winter, as long as you exercise caution and dress properly.

Exercising in cold weather can put extra stress on the body. It is important to consult your physician if you have a medical condition that puts you at risk before starting a new outdoor regimen.

The two conditions you have to worry about are frostbite and hypothermia. Frostbite is the freezing body tissue. It occurs most often on fingers, toes, ears and face. Symptoms of frostbite include pain, numbness, tingling and burning of the affected site. Hypothermia occurs when the core body temperature drops to below 95 degrees F. Symptoms include chills, fatigue, drowsiness, slurred speech, intense shivering and loss of coordination.

The right clothes are your first line of defense. Dress in layers. The first layer should be a thin synthetic fabric such as polypropylene, which helps draw sweat away from the body. The next layer should be fleece or wool to help insulate the body. The top layer should be waterproof to help keep heat from escaping and keep moisture and wind out.

It's also important to protect areas of the body prone to frostbite. A thin pair of gloves under a heavier pair will protect hands. Thermal socks will help protect the feet. It may be necessary to purchase shoes a half size larger to allow for the thickness of the socks. Don't forget a hat or headband to protect your ears.

Be sure to drink plenty of fluids. Dehydration is not just a risk in the summer. When sweating and increased breathing occur, in any type of weather, dehydration is a possibility.

It is particularly important to warm up properly for cold weather workouts. The body tends to stiffen more easily in cold weather. Do a short warm-up activity to help prevent injury.

Remember that shoveling snow can be a good workout, but also can take a toll on people who are not used to heavy lifting. Take the same precautions you would for any other hard outdoor workout, because that is exactly what it is!

After your winter workout, you can warm up with a hearty bowl of Kale and Potato Chowder. With potatoes replacing the cream traditionally used in chowder recipes, this is a fast, economical and healthy soup that will keep the chill away until spring.

KALE AND POTATO CHOWDER

4 cups chopped fresh kale, stems removed
1 1/2 tablespoons olive oil
1 medium onion, diced
1 1/2 teaspoons salt
1 1/2 teaspoons ground black pepper
1 tablespoon poultry seasoning or Italian seasoning
4 cloves garlic, diced
1 (14-ounce) can diced tomatoes -- no salt added, with liquid
4 large baking potatoes, diced with skin
3 cups water
2 cups low-sodium chicken broth
1 large carrot, sliced into thin rounds
1 (15-ounce) can kidney beans, drained and rinsed

1. In a large pot, heat the oil. Add onions, salt, pepper and poultry or Italian seasoning; cook until onions are tender, about 3 to 5 minutes. Add garlic and the tomatoes, and cook for 5 minutes, stirring occasionally. Add the potatoes, water and broth to the soup pot. Bring the ingredients to a boil and reduce to a simmer. Cook until potatoes are almost done, about 10 minutes.

2. Remove 2 cups of the potatoes along with some of the liquid. Place the potatoes and liquid into a blender. Carefully loosen the top of the blender to allow air to circulate, and cover the top with a dish towel to prevent the hot liquid from exploding out. Start blending on the lowest setting, and gradually increase to medium and then high. Blend until the potatoes are smooth.

3. Add the potato mixture, kale, carrots and kidney beans to soup pot; stir to combine. Continue cooking for 10 to 15 minutes until kale and carrots are tender. Taste and add more seasoning as needed. Serve in soup bowl along with side salad of fruit or leafy greens, and wholegrain crackers or bread. Makes 6 (1-1/4 cup) servings.

A.P.N #.: 045-401-006 The undersigned Trustee disclaims any liability for any incorrectness of the street address or other common designation, if any, shown above. If no street address or other common designation is shown, directions to the location of the property may be obtained by sending a written request to the beneficiary within 10 days of the date of first publication of this Notice of Sale. NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call (714) 573-1965 or visit this Internet Web site www.prioritysposting.com, using the file number assigned to this case 13-22582. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the Internet Web site. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale. Energy upgrades

An alternative financing program is available for property owners who wish to upgrade their heating and air conditioning systems, solar systems, roofs, windows and other systems. The "PACE" program offered by Ygrene Energy Fund is now available in Yolo County.

The program offers 100 percent financing to projects on properties that have at least 15 percent equity, and is available for both homeowners and commercial projects. The financing is bound to the property rather than the individual or business on it, and transfers with the property to a new owner like a property tax.

Visit www.CleanEnergyYolo. Using the promo code "UPGRADEYOLO" will earn a savings on the $50 application fee.

Library + museums

Your Yolo County library card can earn you free and low-cost passes to Northern California museums beginning Dec. 1, through the "Discover & Go" program. Visit www.discover.yolocountylibrary.org.

For general library information, visit www.yolocountylibrary.org or look for the library on Facebook.
